

What to expect

BBQGuys has partnered with Logicbroker, an integration platform enabling suppliers to connect to retailers to send and receive data. Below you will find a few things to note prior to beginning the onboarding process with BBQGuys.

Integration Methods

Before you begin onboarding, review with your team to decide how you would like to integrate with Logicbroker.

PORTAL

Portal integrations offer the quickest go-live. Every transaction occurs in the Logicbroker portal.

EDI

EDI integrations allow for more automation. All transactions are sent to and from the supplier's solution and can also be processed in the portal at any point if needed.

API

API integrations allow for seamless real-time data flows. All transactions are sent to and from the API and can also be processed in the portal at any point if needed.

	Portal	EDI	API
Go-live	5 business days	20 business days	20 business days
Supported Formats		AS2, SFTP	XML, JSON
Receive	Orders	850	Orders
Send	Acknowledgements, shipments, invoices	855, 856, 810	Acknowledgements, shipments, invoices
Inventory	XLSX or CSV uploaded into Logicbroker	846	Sent through the API
Packing Slips	Portal download	Map to BBQGuys' specs	Map to BBQGuys' specs

**These timelines are estimates and suppliers are expected to comply*

For your technical team to review:

Portal, EDI and API Specifications

Already using Logicbroker?

If you are already using Logicbroker to connect to another retailer you can either use your existing account or create a new account. If you use the same account, you will see all orders for all channels flow into the same portal. If you choose to create a new account you will need to toggle between accounts to view orders from different channels.

EDI suppliers must use their existing account if they plan on connecting using the same EDI Qualifier and ID.

Onboarding Steps

Once you decide which integration method you'd like to use to connect to Logicbroker, BBQGuys will kickoff your onboarding process. All onboarding steps will take place in our stage (testing) portal. Once onboarding is complete, you will gain access to our production portal. BBQGuys' steps are outlined in grey, supplier steps are outlined in red.

